THE GRAND JURY CHARGES:

INTRODUCTION

At all times relevant to this Indictment, unless otherwise indicated:

I. The Enterprise

1. The Gambino organized crime family of La Cosa Nostra, including its members and associates, constituted an "enterprise," as defined in Title 18, United States Code, Section 1961(4), that is, a group of individuals associated in fact (hereinafter, the "Gambino crime family" and the "enterprise"). This enterprise constituted an ongoing organization whose members functioned as a continuing unit for a common purpose of achieving the objectives of the enterprise. The Gambino crime family engaged in, and its activities affected, interstate and foreign commerce. The Gambino crime family was an organized criminal group that operated in the Eastern District of New York and elsewhere.

2. La Cosa Nostra operated through organized crime families. Five of these crime families – the Bonanno, Colombo, Gambino, Genovese and Luchese crime families – were headquartered in New York City and supervised criminal activity in New York, in other areas of the United States and, in some instances, in other countries. Another crime family, the Decavalcante crime family, operated principally in New Jersey, but from time to time also in New York City.

3. The ruling body of La Cosa Nostra, known as the "Commission," consisted of leaders from each of the crime families. The Commission convened from time to time to decide certain issues affecting all of the crime families, such as rules governing crime family membership.

4. The Gambino crime family had a hierarchy and structure. The head of the Gambino crime family was known as the "boss." The Gambino crime family boss was assisted by an "underboss" and a counselor known as a "consigliere." Together, the boss, underboss and consigliere were the crime family's "administration." With the assistance of the underboss and consigliere, the boss was responsible for, among other things, setting policy and resolving disputes within and between La Cosa Nostra crime families and other criminal groups. The administration further supervised, supported, protected and disciplined the lower-ranking participants in the crime family. In return for their supervision and protection, the administration received part of the illegal earnings generated by the crime family. Members of the Gambino crime family served in an "acting" rather than "official" capacity in the administration on occasion due to another administration member's incarceration or ill health, or for the purpose of seeking to insulate another administration member from law enforcement scrutiny. Further, on occasion, the Gambino crime family was overseen by a "panel" of crime family members that did not include the boss, underboss and/or consigliere.

5. Below the administration of the Gambino crime family were numerous "crews," also known as "regimes" and "decinas." Each crew was headed by a "captain," also known as a "skipper," "caporegime" and "capodecina." Each captain's crew consisted of "soldiers" and "associates." The captain was responsible for supervising the criminal activities of his crew and providing the crew with support and protection. In return, the captain often received a share of the crew's earnings.

6. Only members of the Gambino crime family could serve as a boss, underboss, consigliere, captain or soldier. Members of the crime family were referred to on occasion as “goodfellas” or “wiseguys,” or as persons who had been “straightened out” or who had their “button.” Associates were individuals who were not members of the crime family, but who nonetheless engaged in criminal activity for, and under the protection of, the crime family.

7. Many requirements existed before an associate could become a member of the Gambino crime family. The Commission of La Cosa Nostra from time to time limited the number of new members who could be added to a crime family. An associate was also required to be proposed for membership by an existing crime family member. When the crime family’s administration considered the associate worthy of membership, the administration then circulated the proposed associate’s name on a list given to other La Cosa Nostra crime families, which the other crime families reviewed and either approved or disapproved. Unless there was an objection to the associate’s membership, the crime family then “inducted,” or “straightened out,” the associate as a member of the crime family in a secret ceremony. During the ceremony, the associate, among other things, swore allegiance for life to the crime family above all else, even the associate’s own family; swore, on penalty of death, never to reveal the crime family’s existence, criminal activities and other secrets; and swore to follow all orders issued by the crime family boss, including swearing to commit murder if the boss directed it.

A. Methods and Means of the Enterprise

8. The principal purpose of the Gambino crime family was to generate money for its members and associates. This purpose was implemented by members and associates of the Gambino crime family through various criminal activities, including extortion, bribery, fraud, illegal gambling and loansharking. The members and associates of the Gambino crime family also furthered the enterprise's criminal activities by threatening economic injury and using and threatening to use physical violence, including murder.

9. Although the primary purpose of the Gambino crime family was to generate money for its members and associates, the members and associates at times used the resources of the family to settle personal grievances and vendettas, sometimes without the approval of higher-ranking members of the family. For those purposes, members and associates of the enterprise were asked and expected to carry out, among other crimes, acts of violence, including murder and assault.

10. The members and associates of the Gambino crime family engaged in conduct designed to prevent government detection of their identities, their illegal activities and the location of proceeds of those activities. That conduct included a commitment to murdering persons, particularly members or associates of organized crime families, who were perceived as potential witnesses against members and associates of the enterprise.

11. Members and associates of the Gambino crime family often coordinated criminal activity with members and associates of other organized crime families.

B. The Defendants

12. The defendant ANDREW CAMPOS was a captain within the Gambino crime family.

13. The defendants GEORGE CAMPOS, JAMES CIACCIA, VINCENT FIORE and RICHARD MARTINO were soldiers within the Gambino crime family.

14. The defendants RENATO BARCA, JR., also known as "Ronny,"

[REDACTED] BENITO DIZENZO, also known as "Benny," MARK KOCAJ, also known as “Chippy,” FRANK TARUL, also known as “Bones,” and MICHAEL TARUL, also known as “Perkins,” were associates within the Gambino crime family.

15. The defendant JOHN SIMONALACAJ, also known as “John Si” and “Smiley,” was a Managing Director of Development at a construction development company (“Construction Company #1”), the identity of which is known to the Grand Jury.

II. The Criminal Schemes

16. The defendants and their co-conspirators committed a variety of crimes – including schemes to defraud, bribe and extort – that served to enrich themselves and other members and associates of the Gambino crime family. Through those crimes, the defendants corrupted the construction industry by, among other things, paying bribes to obtain work and other benefits, defrauding the government by failing to pay millions of dollars in taxes and endangering the public by fraudulently procuring required safety certifications. The defendants and their co-conspirators also took steps to conceal their activities from law enforcement, including through the use of nominee owners, check-cashing businesses, fraudulent and inflated requests for payment and false financial records. Certain defendants and co-conspirators also engaged in obstructive conduct, including the destruction of records and the creation of fraudulent documents.

A. The Schemes to Conceal MARTINO’s Finances

17. In 2004, the defendants RICHARD MARTINO and ANDREW CAMPOS, together with others, were charged in the Eastern District of New York with a variety of offenses committed in connection with their association with the Gambino crime family (the “First EDNY Case”). Following their guilty pleas to certain crimes, the defendants RICHARD MARTINO and ANDREW CAMPOS were each sentenced to terms of incarceration and ordered to pay both forfeiture and restitution.

18. After the defendant RICHARD MARTINO's release from the custody of the United States Bureau of Prisons in approximately July 2014, the United States Attorney's Office for the Eastern District of New York sought to enforce the remaining amount of forfeiture owed by MARTINO (the "MARTINO Forfeiture Money Judgment"). To avoid satisfying the MARTINO Forfeiture Money Judgment, among other things, MARTINO and the defendant FRANK TARUL concealed MARTINO's substantial wealth and income.

19. For example, on or about July 10, 2017, the defendant RICHARD MARTINO falsely certified to the United States Probation Department that, among other things he worked at FRANK TARUL's flooring company and did not operate any businesses. In fact, at that time, MARTINO did not work for FRANK TARUL but instead controlled numerous companies (the "MARTINO Companies") that conducted millions of dollars' worth of financial transactions, including construction work, investments in pizzerias and other business ventures. In addition, to hide MARTINO's association with the MARTINO Companies, FRANK TARUL opened multiple bank accounts at Bank of America, N.A., JPMorgan Chase, N.A. and Orange Bank and Trust Company variously in the name of the MARTINO Companies and identified himself as the principal, when in fact MARTINO controlled the MARTINO Companies.

B. The CWC-Related Schemes

20. Since approximately December 2013, the defendant ANDREW CAMPOS was the principal of CWC Construction Corp. and its affiliates, including Eastern

Interiors LLC ("Eastern," together with CWC Construction Corp., "CWC"). CWC was a company that performed carpentry work at various construction projects in the New York City metropolitan area. Other defendants also held positions at CWC, as follows:

(a) The defendant RICHARD MARTINO had an ownership interest in CWC.

(b) The defendants VINCENT FIORE and MARK KOCAJ, also known as "Chippy," were project managers who also had ownership interests in CWC.

(c) The defendant BENITO DIZENZO, also known as "Benny," was a superintendent for various CWC projects.

(d) The defendant [REDACTED] provided labor for various CWC projects.

(e) The defendant RENATO BARCA, JR., also known as "Ronny," was an estimator for CWC.

1. Relevant Tax Laws

21. The Internal Revenue Service ("IRS"), an agency within the United States Department of Treasury, was responsible for administering and enforcing federal revenue laws and regulations regarding ascertainment, computation, assessment and collection of taxes owed to the United States by its citizens and residents.

22. In order to accurately assess and collect taxes, the IRS had to, among other things, determine taxpayers' actual income, credits and deductions. To do that, the IRS used, among other means, tax returns filed pursuant to the tax laws of the United States, as set forth in Title 26 of the United States Code, including as follows:

(a) Individuals: Every citizen and resident of the United States who received gross income in excess of the minimum filing amount established by law for a particular tax year was required to file a United States Individual Income Tax return for that year on an Individual Income Tax Return, Form 1040 ("Form 1040").

(b) Corporations: In general, all domestic corporations in existence for any part of a tax year were required to file an income tax return for that year, whether or not they had any taxable income. A corporation generally was required to file with the IRS a United States Corporation Income Tax Return, Form 1120 ("Form 1120"), or a United States Income Tax Return for an S Corporation, Form 1120S ("Form 1120S"), to report its gross receipts, income, gains, losses, deductions, credits and income tax liabilities. If a corporation had employees, then it generally was required to withhold certain taxes from its employees' pay, including certain amounts owed by employees as income tax. Employers had a duty to collect, truthfully account for and pay over to the IRS Federal Insurance Contributions Act ("FICA") taxes owed by the employer as well as taxes on behalf of their employees to fund various federal benefit programs, including Social Security and Medicare. Under the withholding system, taxes withheld from employees were credited to the employees in payment of their tax liabilities. Every three months, a corporation was required to report how much in wages it withheld from its employees by filing with the IRS a United States Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return, Form 941 ("Form 941"). In addition, every employer generally was required to file and provide to its employees a United States Wage and Tax Statement, Form W-2 ("Form W-2"), to report, among other things, the income tax withheld from the employee and paid to the IRS.

2. Payroll Tax Avoidance Scheme

23. Between approximately June 2014 and the present, the defendants ANDREW CAMPOS, [REDACTED] VINCENT FIORE and MARK KOCAJ, together with others, engaged in a scheme to pay CWC employees in cash without making the required payroll tax withholdings and payments. At times, some CWC employees were paid entirely in cash. At other times, the employees were paid in part by check, with withholdings having been made only for the portion of pay covered by the check, and in part by cash, without the required withholdings having been made. To facilitate this scheme, the co-conspirators made use of check-cashing businesses, cashing millions of dollars in checks issued by CWC to certain entities and distributing the cash to CWC employees without making the required tax withholdings.

3. Honest Services Wire Fraud Schemes

24. Between approximately June 2018 and June 2019, the defendants ANDREW CAMPOS, BENITO DIZENZO, VINCENT FIORE and MARK KOCAJ, together with others, engaged in a series of wire fraud schemes by, among other things, paying and agreeing to pay bribes and kickbacks to multiple employees of construction companies in exchange for their support of CWC, including awarding contracts to CWC, securing payments to CWC and assisting in the approval of "change orders," which were necessary when work was added or deleted from the original scope of work in a contract. These bribes and kickbacks were made in cash and through in-kind benefits in the form of, among other things, free labor and construction materials.

(a) Construction Company #1

25. Between approximately June 2018 and June 2019, the defendants ANDREW CAMPOS, BENITO DIZENZO, MARK KOCAJ and VINCENT FIORE, together with other others, paid hundreds of thousands of dollars in bribes and kickbacks to multiple Construction Company #1 employees, including the defendant JOHN SIMONLACAJ, in exchange for, among other things, assistance in awarding contracts to CWC, approving CWC change orders and securing payments to CWC. For example, CWC paid bribes and kickbacks to SIMONLACAJ in the form of, among other things, free labor and materials used to perform extensive renovations at SIMONLACAJ's residence in Scarsdale, New York.

(b) Construction Company #2

26. Between approximately December 2018 and June 2019, the defendants VINCENT FIORE and BENITO DIZENZO, together with others, paid bribes and kickbacks to employees of a construction development company ("Construction Company #2"), the identity of which is known to the Grand Jury, which served as, among other things, the developer of a project in Yonkers, New York on which CWC worked. For example, during this period, the defendants VINCENT FIORE and BENITO DIZENZO provided free labor and materials at a location in White Plains, New York, which became a business associated with an employee of Construction Company #2 in exchange for, among other things, the employee's assistance in approving change orders.

(c) Construction Company #3

27. The defendant VINCENT FIORE, together with others, paid bribes and kickbacks to employees of a construction company ("Construction Company #3"), the identity of which is known to the Grand Jury, which served as the general contractor of a project located in New York, New York on which CWC worked. For example, between January 2019 and May 2019, FIORE procured valuable tickets to amusement parks in Orlando, Florida and gave them to an employee of Construction Company #3 in exchange for, among other things, the employee's assistance in approving change orders.

(d) Other Construction Companies

28. In addition to the illicit payments to employees of Construction Company #1, Construction Company #2 and Construction Company #3, the defendants and their co-conspirators also paid bribes and kickbacks to employees of other construction companies through, among other things, in-kind benefits, such as free labor and materials at the employees' homes in exchange for, among other things, the employees' assistance in approving change orders.

4. Overbilling Scheme

29. Between approximately June 2018 and May 2019, the defendants ANDREW CAMPOS, VINCENT FIORE and MARK KOCAJ, together with others, also perpetrated a scheme to defraud by submitting fraudulent change orders to two construction companies ("Construction Company #4" and Construction Company #5"), the identities of which are known to the Grand Jury, that served as the general contractors for, among others, projects located in New York, New York and Yonkers, New York, respectively.

30. Under CWC's contracts with Construction Company #4 and Construction Company #5, if a change order increased the cost of a project, the general contractors would pay the increased cost of the change order plus an agreed-upon percentage. The defendants ANDREW CAMPOS, VINCENT FIORE and MARK KOCAJ submitted multiple change orders that inflated the true costs of the change orders, which caused them to earn far in excess of the agreed-upon profit. In other circumstances, the change orders requested payment for work that would not be performed at the construction project at all, including, for instance, work performed at construction executives' homes as bribes and kickbacks.

31. In addition, the defendant VINCENT FIORE, together with others, used CWC to perform renovations at both the home of his mother in New Jersey (the "FIORE New Jersey Residence") and a home he purchased in May 2019 in Briarcliff Manor, New York (the "FIORE New York Residence," together with the FIORE New Jersey Residence, the "FIORE Residences"). FIORE also stole materials from CWC projects and used them to renovate the FIORE Residences and caused CWC to submit change orders to, among others, Construction Company #5, which fraudulently sought payment for some of the costs incurred by CWC for work performed at the FIORE Residences.

5. Additional Checks Scheme

32. Beginning in approximately October 2014, the defendants ANDREW CAMPOS and VINCENT FIORE, together with others, caused CWC to issue checks to associates for work that was never performed (the "Additional Checks"). These associates went to check-cashing businesses, cashed the Additional Checks and returned the money to the defendants. The defendants and their co-conspirators completed documentation falsely stating that these Additional Checks were for work performed in connection with CWC construction projects.

6. Dorset Properties Scheme

33. In approximately 2018, the defendant ANDREW CAMPOS began constructing a home located on Dorset Road in Scarsdale, New York (the “CAMPOS Residence”). The labor and materials were paid for by CWC using the proceeds of multiple frauds. To justify the expenditure of hundreds of thousands of dollars on his home, ANDREW CAMPOS created a company called Dorset Properties LLC (“Dorset Properties”), of which he and his wife were the owners. This work was accounted for in CWC’s financial statements as a project for which CWC served as the general contractor and Dorset Properties was the customer. Although Dorset Properties reimbursed CWC for a portion of the expenses it incurred in constructing the CAMPOS Residence, as of June 2019, CWC had paid over $350,000 in materials and expenses relating to the construction of the CAMPOS Residence that had not been reimbursed.

7. OSHA False Statements Scheme

34. Certain defendants conspired to make false statements to the United States Department of Labor (the “DOL”) in connection with its administration of its Occupational Safety and Health Act (“OSHA”) Outreach Training Program (“OTP”) to fraudulently procure cards indicating their completion of required construction training courses. OSHA OTP training instructors were required, among other things, to file OTP training reports with the DOL after each training session that certified, among other things, the individuals who attended each class.

35. Between approximately January 2018 and May 2019, the defendants RENATO BARCA, JR., ANDREW CAMPOS, GEORGE CAMPOS, JAMES CIACCIA, BENITO DIZENZO, VINCENT FIORE, MARK KOCAJ and MICHAEL TARUL, together with others, fraudulently acquired OSHA OTP cards by agreeing with an OTP instructor (the “Instructor”) to falsely report to the DOL that they had completed certain OTP courses.

These defendants also falsely certified to a training company that certain CWC supervisors had completed required OSHA OTP courses and additional training to obtain site supervisor training cards, which were required by New York City law.

C. Obstructive Conduct

36. The defendants ANDREW CAMPOS and VINCENT FIORE, together with others, engaged in obstructive conduct to attempt to shield their criminal activities from law enforcement. For example, between approximately May 2019 and June 2019, the defendant VINCENT FIORE instructed others to destroy documents, including payroll records. In addition, in or about November 2019, ANDREW CAMPOS and FIORE directed an individual to falsely take responsibility for conduct relating to the Additional Checks scheme described above. Specifically, FIORE directed that ANDREW CAMPOS would pay for the individual’s legal expenses and possible financial penalties for, among other things, cashing the Additional Checks and returning the money to FIORE. Furthermore, between approximately October 2019 and November 2019, FIORE instructed an individual to create a false invoice to justify work that CWC workers had performed at the FIORE New York Residence and to falsely state to law enforcement that FIORE had paid for the work if questioned about that work.
